

DEMPSEY KNOCKS SHARKEY COLD AS A FRAPPE IN 7TH

It Was the Old Story of The Hare and The Tortoise

SHARKEY CONFIDENT

He Thought That He Was A Pretty Good Young Man

By Davis J. Walsh
I. N. S. Sports Editor

NEW YORK, July 22.—They had two strikes on Babe Ruth and then he hit one over the fence.

The old, old story, ancient as sin
itself, the tale of the hare and the tortoise, was repeated all over again at the Yankee Stadium last night when Jack Dempsey, the great killer of Fistiana, added another pelt to the old thatch pole. He knocked Jack Sharkey, that painfully confident young man from Boston, colder than a frappe after forty-five seconds of fighting in the seventh round, at a time when the tortoise seemed tottering on his last, pained old legs and the hare was skimming over the landscape as only a hare can.

They were just about to declare it no contest out of resigned pity and prepare the melancholy obituaries
about the man who was compared with the man who wasn't, when suddenly out of nowhere Dempsey lashed away in a clinch with a left to the body and jaw and Sharkey was no more.

Yes, they have had two strikes on Ruth. Many a man, they say, was born that way, but it means nothing to Ruth just as a few slaps on the side curtains mean nothing to Jack Dempsey.

For Dempsey, often compared to the tiger, might be old and broken and toothless but as long as a tiger breathes he is dangerous to human kind and so it is with the man who lives within the man who masquerades
under the synthetic polish and culture that is William Harrison Dempsey.

It seems like taking something from a citizen who has about everything to day when I say that Sharkey lost the fight as much as Dempsey won it.
This great hook—and a man hardly could go wrong against the remnant of a Dempsey that plodded doggedly about the ring last night. But the point is that Sharkey did go wrong,
awfully, painfully wrong.

He thought he was a pretty good fighter and I am not convinced yet that he wasn't and isn't. But the pitcher who slips one to Babe Ruth in the groove just because George is two down and one to go is a sap of purest ray serene and you can take my word for it that Sharkey was a most sincere sap last night.

He had before him the spectacle
that was presented at the Philadelphia Stadium last September when Gene Tunney quite sensibly declined to meet Dempsey body to body and heave at it like a couple of longshoremen.
Instead, he moved rapidly about in widening circles, making a stand only long enough to slap Dempsey about with quick, short punches and then went right away from there.

I don't say that Sharkey is a Tunney.
But he certainly is not a Dempsey,
a statement to which undoubtedly
he will place his seal and hand today.

He ought to know it, anyhow, for if he doesn't know now, the truth is never for him. He had the superior speed but he refused to use it, being too vain to back away even from the human killer.

It didn't seem to matter that Dempsey's legs were gone and that he had three rounds or less, they must fold up of their own weakness. So Sharkey was too arrogant for such a finish
as that. He must finish Dempsey with his own hand and, in such a program, it was inevitable that one man or the other must go quickly. In such a game, the odds were all with Dempsey and so Sharkey, of necessity, was elected. I hope he likes the office.

Of course, the question of Dempsey's left to the body had to come in for severe scrutiny and, in truth, it was

Bristol Fight Fans Out To Get The News

Bristol fight fans had a big time last night as they listened in to the Dempsey-Sharkey bout. There was much interest in the bout in Bristol and in fact boxing during the past few years has taken a decided jump in the minds and hearts of residents here.

There was blow-by-blow broadcasting last night from the store of Thomas Profy, Mill street; Alfred Tomesani, Mill street; St. Ann's block party;
Dorance and Pond streets; Lincoln Filling Station, Lincoln avenue and Pond street; Harriman Cigar & Candy Store, Farragut avenue.

Large crowds gathered outside all of these places and cheered their favorite as telling blows were landed.

In addition to the folks who gathered at the places mentioned above, hundreds sat in their homes and listened-in.
Some of these had never before expressed any interest in prize fighting but it is just another one of the changes which are occurring daily.

CAROL IS GRIEVED OVER FORMER FOLLIES

Thinks of Himself As "The Man Who Would Be King"

HAS LITTLE TO SAY

By William I. Carney

PARIS, July 22.—Former Crown Prince Carol of Roumania is grieving today because he is "the man who would be king."

Tardy realization of his previous follies have succeeded Carol's genuine grief of two days over the death of his father, King Ferdinand.

Carol is grieving today because he threw away the crown. Until today in numerous long talks with the former crown prince, the correspondents always addressed him as "your highness."
When the International News Service Correspondent was received by Carol this morning, he unspectacularly used the same greeting.

Carol cast a side glance at the correspondent and said nothing. After a strained silence, Mme. Lupescu, the beautiful, red-haired Roumanian woman with whom Carol has been living in Neuilly, made the correcting remark:

"It is 'His Majesty' please."

LATE NEWS

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., July 22 (I.N.S.)—One death and thousands of dollars of damage was reported to have resulted from a hail storm at Cooperdale and the southern part of Johnstown today. The storm was reported to have been the worst in this section for many years. Louis Steffanich, 17 months old, drowned when he fell into a pool of water formed following the heavy rainfall that accompanied the hail.

PHILADELPHIA, July 22 (I.N.S.)—An argument over the outcome of the Dempsey-Sharkey fight at New York last night resulted in the death of Thomas Calloucci, 27, here, early today.

CAMBRIA CO. LEADS IN TREE PLANTING

Sets Out Total of 980,015
Saplings During
Spring

OTHER STATE NEWS

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 22 (I.N.S.)— 980,015 small trees furnished by the state department of forests and waters during the spring planting season, led all the counties of the state, according to a county schedule made public here today. One hundred eight persons or organizations in the county received trees from the department.

Planters in Elk county were second with 771,000 seedlings while Berks was a close third with 754,195. In Berks county 156 applicants were given trees, the largest number of planters in any county.

Final figures for the entire spring season show that 13,691,029 young trees were planted in the 67 counties by persons who received them from the department.

LEWISTOWN, Pa., July 22 (I.N.S.)—

The memory of Thaddeus Stevens, father of the common school system
of Pennsylvania, and famous civil war time abolitionist, is to be honored at ceremonies to be held at Caledonia Park, Franklin county, on July 30, when a bronze tablet presented by the Pennsylvania Alpine Club to the department of forests and waters, is to be unveiled to mark the site of the old Caledonia Furnace, built by Stevens and later destroyed by the Confederate army.

General Jubal A. Early's confederates destroyed the historic furnace, which furnished employment to the surrounding countryside, on June 26, 1863, on his raiding trip from Chambersburg
to Wrightsville.

Gov. John A. Fisher will deliver an address on the life of Stevens, while other talks are to be given by John
A. Keith, State Superintendent of Public Instruction; Frederick A. Goddard,
State Librarian; Dr. H. H. Shenk,
State Archivist; William A. Bourne,
Superintendent of the Thaddeus Stevens
Industrial School, Lancaster, and a number of others.

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 22 (I.N.S.)—

A dream that her son, Alfred Whiteside, 28, of Syracuse, would be drowned, came true when Mrs. Jessie Whiteside received word at her home here that the young man fell into the St. Lawrence River at Thousand Islands, and met death.

The mother begged her son not to take his annual outing on the island, she said, for in a dream she had seen his lifeless body taken from the water.

PITTSBURGH, July 22 (I.N.S.)— Authorities here have decided to employ life guards and allow the children to enjoy municipal pools every Sunday.

Various associations expressed a fear that it was illegal to engage the life guards on Sunday, and refused to operate swimming pools under their jurisdiction.

Members of the city council decided that if private pools could be operated for the benefit of those who could afford to pay, the city could at least run the municipal recreation centers on Sunday.

RIEKER BURIED IN VERY QUIET MANNER

Simple Service for Suicide Slayer of Two Held In Trenton

COUSINS ARE BEARERS

TRENTON, N. J., July 22.—Burial services were held at 10.30 o'clock yesterday morning for Ernest E.
Rieker, aged 32 years, slayer of his wife, Helen, and Bucks County Sheriff Abram L. Kulp. Rieker ended his own life by hanging in the county jail at Doylestown early last Tuesday. Members of his family had kept the funeral arrangements secret beforehand, in order that the ceremony
might be strictly private.

Only the members of his father's immediate family attended Rieker's funeral, accompanied by their wives or husbands and children. None of the relatives on the slain wife's side of the house were present.

The only child of the Rieker's, Doris, aged two years, did not attend the burial of her father. The little girl has been staying with her mother's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence D.
Oakley, of South Langhorne, Pa., since the mother was fatally shot by the murdered father last February 23. The child was with the grandparents yesterday
and, according to word from them,
they expect her to remain there.

Six cousins of Rieker acted as pallbearers,
two of them being from Philadelphia.
One of the latter is the "Lou" whose letter of encouragement was received at the Doylestown jail on Tuesday
about the time Rieker's dead body was being removed from his cell. It had been generally presumed that the writer of the "Lou" letter was a woman friend of Rieker's, as he had written some verse found in his cell that mentioned a "double life" he had led some time ago.

The funeral ceremony comprised a reading of scripture, without any eulogy, by the Rev. D. Wilson Hollinger, pastor of Bethany Presbyterian Church here. The service was held at the funeral parlors of Ralph Thatcher, 999 South Broad street, with burial
in the family plot at Riverview Cemetery, under direction of Thatcher. In a note left in his cell, Rieker had urged that Undertaker Thatcher be notified of his death.

The funeral cortege to the cemetery contained few coaches. There were a number of floral pieces sent to the undertaking parlors, but Rieker's family took the cards and no names of the donors were announced.

Rieker was employed as clerk in the inheritance tax office at the State house here at the time his fit of frenzy caused him to commit the crimes that brought untold sadness to his relatives and those of his wife and the sheriff.

His father, Tobias Rieker, formerly conducted a shoe store here at 792 South Broad street, and now lives with a daughter, Mrs. Echebner, at Roebeling, N. J. He arranged the funeral. Rieker is also survived by a brother, John, of 909 Hamilton avenue,
and two sisters, Mrs. Thomas Callery, of Florence, and Mrs. William Steen,
of South Cook avenue, this city.

BIG BROTHERS PUT JOY INTO LIVES OF LITTLE CITY FRIENDS

Camp Lincoln, On the Banks of the Neshaminy, Takes Care
Of 100 Young Lads Each Week — Minds and Bodies Are Well Looked After

HULMEVILLE, July 22.—Close your eyes for a few seconds and try to picture
a group of eight boys washing and drying dishes for 100 in an amazing short period of time. Now close your eyes tighter and step hard on your imagination—then think of said
group doing such a task cheerfully, with grins making their faces look wider than they are long.

This picture can be seen in reality
by anyone fortunate enough to gain entrance over the lines that bound Camp Lincoln, the playground for hundreds of Philadelphia boys during the summer.

Camp Lincoln has been located on the bank of the Neshaminy, in Bensalem Township, for several years, and through the efforts of the Big Brothers Association of Philadelphia, lads in poor circumstances and whose surroundings are not of the best, enjoy a real vacation at this ideal spot.

The camp is situated just opposite Mt.
Misery, well known to residents and visitors in this vicinity. The camp has grown within the past year, several new tents having been added.

"Sure, I like it here," one youngster was heard to remark. "We have a dandy time and the eats are fine." By the din that arises during the mess period and play hours it is certain all "residents" of Camp Lincoln would say "Amen" to these words.

One manly little fellow who had been appointed as our official guide, proudly informed us he had been at camp for a short period each of the past nine years. "I assist one of the counsellors," he added. Although the same boys are not privileged to be accommodated at camp each year, some are given the opportunity by those in charge to assist with the routine of camp life, this privilege being a great factor toward giving the boys a greater feeling of appreciation, and a higher value of their worthiness.

Camp Lincoln consists of several buildings and 20 tents. The tents rest upon platforms raised a few feet above the ground, and accommodate either four or five boys. In each there are comfortable cots, garment hangers,

EDDINGTON OPENS BIG CARNIVAL TONIGHT

Eighth Annual Affair To Be Given By Improvement
Association

M A N Y ATTRACTIONS

Tonight opens the eighth annual carnival of the Eddington Improvement Association. There will be the usual attractions and a number of additional ones which will be featured tonight for the first time.

In "The E. I. A. News," the publication of the Eddington Improvement Association, it is explained why the carnival is held. It reads as follows:
"Nearly everyone in this vicinity knows why we have a Carnival each year or they should know. Our budget for the next twelve months calls for the expenditure of almost twelve hundred dollars for the maintenance of the street and road lights throughout the community.

"There are also other needed improvements that will have to be taken care of during that time, and last but not least, we hope some time to build a Community House. All these things take money, lots of it, and as they are a direct benefit to everyone in the community, the Association should have the support of everyone in the effort it is making to carry out its program of community improvement.
So come out to the Carnival, bring your friends, all of them if possible,
and enjoy yourselves."

Veterinary Club To Meet At Fox Chase, July 29th

The next meeting of the Bucks County Veterinary Club will be held at the farm of Dr. J. W. Vansant, Fox Chase, on Friday afternoon, July 29th,
at 1.30 o'clock.

Dr. Roger S. Amador, professor of physiology at the University of Pennsylvania's School of Veterinary Medicine in Philadelphia, will address the meeting on the subject of the "Circulatory System."

Prominent veterinarians from Bucks
and Montgomery counties are expected to attend the meeting.

OBJECTIONS FILED TO RIVER BRIDGE AS NOW PROPOSED

J. Hampton Moore Says It Will Impede Deeper
Waterways

ANDERSON APPROVES

Bristol Burgess Thinks Land
Navigator Should Have Consideration

(By Staff Representative)

PHILADELPHIA, July 22.—Objections and endorsements marked the hearing held here today on the proposed bridge across the Delaware River between Bristol and Burlington.
The objections filed in the most part were against the bridge as planned and it was intimated that if other plans could be procured whereby navigation would not be impeded that many of these objections would be eliminated.

Those at the meeting from Bristol
were Burgess Clifford L. Anderson;
John H. Hardy, Bristol Exchange
Club; Carl Wenzel, Bristol Rotary Club; John F. Smoyer, Mill Street
Business Men's Association.

Robert Merkel, Burlington Island Amusement Co., and George Baker of the same organization, were also in attendance.

The hearing was held in room 201
Hourse Building before F. C. Boggs, Colonel, Corps of Engineers, of the U. S. Government.

In speaking at the hearing Burgess Anderson, Bristol, stated that he thought that land navigation should be given some consideration as well as water navigation. He stated that the Government had the plans of the bridge and he was of the opinion that a way would be found whereby the request for a franchise would be granted.

Resolutions of endorsement were filed by Bristol Borough Council, the Bristol Exchange Club and the Bristol
Rotary Club, Burlington City Council,
Burlington Chamber of Commerce,
Keystone Aircraft Corporation, Bristol.

Hon. J. Hampton Moore, president, Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association, objected to the plans of the proposed span arguing that it would seriously impede navigation and be a hindrance to the deeper waterways in the Delaware.

The former mayor of Philadelphia, however, commended the idea of an airport on Burlington Island which was also approved by the Keystone Airplane Co.

Objections were also filed by Tow
Boatmen's Association, E. A. Mace,
Trenton Chamber of Commerce; R. D.
Wood, Florence, N. J.

J. Hampton Moore demanded the bridge consist of one span, similar to the Delaware River Bridge connecting Philadelphia and Camden, which cost more than $37,000,000. He opposed the proposed bridge of two spans which calls for one span from Bristol to Burlington Island, and another from Burlington Island to Burlington City.

"In our opinion," Moore said, "navigation would be menaced by the erection of two bridges as proposed. If any bridge is to be permitted as indicated in the act of congress it should avoid Burlington Island altogether."

"A location north or south of the island would be more suitable to the interest of navigation because it would provide less interference, with the possible future business of a national or international character, when a deeper upper Delaware River channel is installed, and ultimately a canal channel is connected across the state of New Jersey."

Moore also contended that the bridge would interfere with deepening of the upper Delaware and this he claimed the United States Government would be a sufferer in this respect, especially in event of war.

The plans proposed to have the bridge from St. Mary's street, Burlington, to Burlington Island thence to Market street, Bristol.

JULY NEWS LETTER

By Alice Langelier
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
BRISTOL, July 22.—All the Mariannes are preparing to parade the ewards in connection with the of July Fete. All the little girls between 18 and 22 years of age who are employed in the neighborhood of the center of Paris, will be selected according to their good conduct at home or in the workshop. There will also be a Super-Marianne she and her attendant Mariannes proclaimed at the Place de la Fete on the morning of the great July Day, after which the procession and music will begin.

BRISTOL, July 21.—Jay-walking will be impossible as well as unnecessary in Paris. Monsieur Chappie, chief of Police, has just announced four hundred and fifty posts similar to those already in use on the boulevards. Elysees, have been ordered the manufacturers and will soon set up at all points in the city. Traffic is considered dangerous. Long sleeves are invariably the fashion and the little bishop sleeve with some dainty trimming at the wrist is the most favored of all.

Friends and relatives of Madame who died recently at Marseilles arrived at the railroad station of Paris to assist at the ceremony of moving the coffin from the train and into it to a cemetery for burial. The coffin was opened and it was found to be empty. "Cor-la-Rue!" cried the 15th Senegalese regiment. The services were postponed.

The honeymoon will soon resume the usual wedding journey of the railroad and hotel prices keep soaring.

A young and pretty Frenchwoman noticed recently wandering from Paris to another along the Riviera. Attractive as you are, you should have a husband," someone suggested. "I have," she replied, "but wedding days are so dear these days that I left him at home and am spending my honeymoon alone."

The original marriage announcement is the names of the couple on the page and the following formula: "We have the pleasure of announcing the marriage celebrated in the church of St. Philippe du Roule . . . pray for them."

Monsieur Catry, Director of the prison, who received the mysterious telephone call which liberated the Royalist Leon Daudet, was often heard to boast that the celebrated Catry, Remy, who had succeeded in escaping from seven different prisons, had never slipped through his hands if as found behind his gates. Monsieur Catry evidently never imagined a telephone could open the prison doors. He and his inseparable foxglove are now seeking other quarters.

A gardener in the village of Courthezon, between Orange and Avignon, thinks he has about the largest tomato-plant in the world. It measures 31 and one-half inches in height and nearly nine in circumference. The future production of the giant plant is estimated at eight hundred tomatoes.

Nothing looked better at the dinner parties given after the Grand Steeple-chase than the simple frocks with good jewels and beautiful lame coats trimmed with good fur. A plain beige dress and coat of beige georgette trimmed with shaded beige fox were worn with a crinoline hat trimmed with a bunch of white and red currants and a black georgette dress, just touched with tan piping round the edges of a double bolero front and ten tassels on the narrow black tie at the collar was worn with a large hat of coarse tan straw bound with black round the brim and trimmed with black ribbon.

Both at the races and after, skirts of the chic frocks were noticed to be longer than normal by an inch or so, the length being given by the uneven hem and dipping draperies. Long sleeves are invariably the fashion and the little bishop sleeve with some dainty trimming at the wrist is the most favored of all.

—Captain and Mrs. H. W. Elrod, of Staten Island, and Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Smith, of Orange, N. J., were week-end guests of Mrs. Henry E. Ancker, of Radcliffe street. Mr. Smith was formerly connected with the ship yard, holding position as vice-president.

—Miss Jennie Kite, of Morrisville, who has been a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pierce, of Mulberry street for several days, has returned to her home.

—Mr. and Mrs. H. Shipp and Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Shipp, of 605 Radcliffe street, are spending several days in Atlantic City.

—Mr. and Mrs. Johnston McAuley and family, of Pond street, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Burtonwood and family, of Jefferson avenue will leave Saturday to spend two weeks at Ocean Grove. They will occupy the cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Thompson.

—Mrs. Eva Allen and daughter Margaret, of New Buckley street and niece, Miss Viola Mount, of Garden street, were Saturday guests of Mrs. Allen's cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rogers, of Burlington, N. J.

—Miss Mary McGill, of Otter street, is spending several weeks visiting friends in Scranton, Pa.

OPPORTUNITY FOR ALL

America is still the land of opportunity, let those who may speak to the contrary. Nothing is more absurd than the familiar complaint that nothing more is to be gained in the New World by ambition and merit. These Jeremiahs believe in all seriousness that all the rich men are rich already and no more are to be made rich, that the world has exhausted its entire supply of honors and all that remains for the ambitious today is to work for a wage or a salary and hope in vain that some day a ten-spot invested in wildcat oil stock will make them rich.

In truth there are more men making fortunes and winning renown and high honors in this country than ever before if these new fortunes and honors were to be judged by those of the past. The difficulty now is clerks and laborers speak of fortunes in terms of millions and honors in terms of world-conquerors, presidents, international diplomats, world-famous artists and the like. Those were lower stars to which our forefathers hitched their aspiring wagons. There are still big stakes, but many of us must be content with such as were big a score of years ago.

If the American is not too particular there is no valid reason why he can not win some monetary or honorary prize, just as there are few Frenchmen who need to be without some ribbon of honor. Just now there seems to be at least a half dozen opportunities for fame and fortune for every man, woman and child who can read and write words of one syllable.

Everywhere the eye travels is found heralded fascinating announcement of prizes, all kinds and varieties of prizes imaginable. Just a few of them are peace prizes, essay prizes, air flight prizes, prize novels, prize plays, prize names, harmonica prizes, art prizes, scholarship prizes, the Nobel prize, marble prizes, athletic prizes, puzzle prizes, missing letter prizes, oratorical prizes, new idea prizes and countless others too numerous to enumerate. Surely there is opportunity enough for all here.

THE JAP BEETLE SCOURGE

To a shipment of nursery stock from Japan to New Jersey in 1916 has been traced the importation of the latest scourge to descend upon American farm crops. Today the offspring of the white grubs which were concealed in the earth around the roots of these plants infests the Eastern United States to the extent of 4,000 square miles.

Its destructive march similar to that of the locust, the food tastes of this new insect pest range the entire scale of native vegetation. Mined unchecked, federal biologists while its progress to date has registers are now in Japan seeking other forms of parasitic life that in their turn prey upon this beetle, so that efforts may be made to eradicate this pest before the scourge becomes a nation-wide menace to agriculture.

Perfection being such a relative thing, how did the reformers know when they had reached it?

There are some persons who never made mistakes, but the evidence is all on their tombstones.

A lot of things happen because so many persons are over-confident of their ability to dodge trouble.

DAILY NEWS LETTER

By Alice Langellier

I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

PARIS, July 22.—All the Mariannes of Paris are preparing to parade the Boulevards in connection with the 14th of July Fete. All the little girls between 18 and 22 years of age who reside or are employed in the neighborhood of the center of Paris, will be elected according to their good conduct at home or in the workshop.

There will also be a Super-Marianne and she and her attendant Mariannes will be proclaimed at the Place de l'Opera on the morning of the great Bastille Day, after which the procession and music will begin.

PARIS, July 21.—Jay-walking will soon be impossible as well as unnecessary in Paris. Monsieur Chappie, Prefect of Police, has just announced that four hundred and fifty posts similar to those already in use on the Champs Elysees, have been ordered from the manufacturers and will soon be set up at all points in the city where traffic is considered dangerous. They will undoubtedly bear the same inscription as on the old signs: "Traverse des Piétons."

Friends and relatives of Madame Bon, who died recently at Marseilles gathered at the railroad station of Vienne to assist at the ceremony of removing the coffin from the train and bearing it to a cemetery for burial. When the coffin was opened it was found to bear the plate reading: "Corporal Robineau of the 15th Senegalese regiment." The services were postponed.

The lone honeymoon will soon replace the usual wedding journey of two, if railroad and hotel prices keep on soaring.

A young and pretty Frenchwoman was noticed recently wandering from one city to another along the Riviera. "Attractive as you are, you should have a husband," someone suggested. "I have," she replied, "but wedding journeys are so dear these days that I have left him at home and am spending my honeymoon alone."

An original marriage announcement bears the names of the couple on the front page and the following formula on the second:

"Have the pleasure of announcing their marriage celebrated in the church of St. Philippe du Roule . . . Pray for them."

Monsieur Catry, Director of the Sainte prison, who received the mysterious telephone call which liberated the Royalist Leon Daudet, was often heard to boast that the celebrated crook, Remy, who had succeeded in escaping from seven different prisons, would never slip through his hands if he was found behind his gates. Monsieur Catry evidently never imagined that a telephone could open the prison bars. He and his inseparable fox-terrier are now seeking other quarters.

A gardener in the village of Courchezeu, between Orange and Avignon, thinks he has about the largest tomato-plant in the world. It measures 31 and one-half inches in height and nearly nine in circumference. The future production of the giant plant is estimated at eight hundred tomatoes.

Nothing looked better at the dinner parties given after the Grand Steeple-chase than the simple frocks with good jewels and beautiful lame coats trimmed with good fur. A plain beige dress and coat of beige georgette trimmed with shaded beige fox were worn with a crinoline hat trimmed with a bunch of white and red currants and a black georgette dress, just touched with tan piping round the edges of a double bolero front and ten tassels on the narrow black tie at the collar was worn with a large hat of coarse tan straw bound with black round the brim and trimmed with black ribbon.

Both at the races and after, skirts of the chic frocks were noticed to be longer than normal by an inch or so, the length being given by the uneven hem and dipping draperies. Long sleeves are invariably the fashion and the little bishop sleeve with some dainty trimming at the wrist is the most favored of all.

WOMEN WITH BOBBED HAIR VERY

EASILY GET RID OF GRAY HAIRS

With Color Glands Normal Nature Keeps Hair Natural Shade

SENSIBLE ADVICE TO WOMEN TURNING GRAY

Everyone knows if their color glands and hair roots are active and normal they will continue indefinitely to have rich, natural colored hair entirely free of gray, or off-colored locks, so why use dyes or tints?

A doctor several years ago asked himself this question: "If with certain medicines I can stimulate my patient's other organs, why not rub a stimulating tonic into the scalp that will revive, strengthen and tone up these inactive glands so that nature in her own inimitable way will resume putting plenty of pigment into the hair tubes? Surely the hair will then again resume its original shade and color regardless of the users' age or previous condition of their hair."

REMARKABLE DISCOVERY
He didn't want an artificial dye or tint and it of course must be harmless and something that could be used for years and years without the slightest injury to hair or scalp. Just like a tonic that builds up a person's strength after some long wasting illness, he wanted a tonic that would revive and stimulate the inactive, weak, or dormant hair roots and color glands.

Under the name of Lea's Hair Tonic anyone may now purchase the scalp food and tonic he finally perfected. For several years hair dressers and specialists have been using it. Results are so natural, gradual and nice that men as well as women use it.

It doesn't stain the scalp. One's friends seldom notice the gradual change and to test what it will do one need only apply it to some small spot for a week or two and watch results.

Men and women in all walks of life have been amazed at the younger appearance that comes with the disappearance of gray hairs from their head. Evidently one need never become gray if they keep the scalp and roots toned up with an occasional massage with Lea's Hair Tonic.

If any reader desires to try a bottle of Lea's Hair Tonic on the maker's absolute guarantee of satisfaction or money back, they should purchase a bottle at the drug store or pin a dollar bill to this advertisement and send with name and address plainly written to Lea's Tonic Co., Brentwood, Md. $1 bottles parcel post anywhere with full directions.

No one need have gray or off-colored hair any more.—(Adv.)

Earning The Good Will of Used Car Buyers

The good will of our used car customers is just as important to us as the good will of those who buy new cars here—and we strive just as earnestly to merit it!

Everyone who deals with our used car division is assured the most courteous treatment and the finest service of which this organization is capable.

This policy has proved to be a valuable one—for we have many loyal friends who became acquainted with us through the purchase of a used car.

POLLYANNA

COLYUM

Lady with Sharp Features (in drug store)—We've just moved. I need insect powder. Polite Clerk—Will you take it with you? Lady with sharp features—No. I'll have the roaches call and you can give it to them.

"Fortunately I do not have to keep the circular letters which I get," said a Bristol man, "otherwise I would have to move out into the suburbs and purchase a hay baler.

DO IT NOW

"He cannot read his tombstone when he's dead."

If with pleasure you are viewing any work a man is doing, If you like him, if you love him, tell him now;

Don't withhold your approbation till the parson makes oration As he lies with snowy lilies o'er his brow.

For no matter how you shout it, he won't really care about it. He won't know how many teardrops you have shed;

If you think some praise is due him, now's the time to hand it to him. For he cannot read his tombstone when he's dead.

More than fame and more than money is the comment kind and sunny, And the hearty, warm approval of a friend,

For it gives to life a savor, for it makes you stronger, braver, And gives you heart and spirit to the end.

If he earns your praise—bestow it; If you like him, let him know it, Let the words of true encouragement be said.

Do not wait till life is over and he's underneath the clover, For he cannot read his tombstone when he's dead.

If you have ever seen a fat woman in knickers you were probably convinced that a man is not the only animal wonderfully and fearfully made.

Life is soft these days. Think of a knight in armor afflicted with hives.

Take care of the children's happiness and your own will take care of itself.

Orator: "I thought your paper was friendly to me?" Editor: "So it is. What's the matter?"

Orator: "I made a speech at the dinner last night, and you didn't print a line of it."

Editor: "Well, what further proof do you want?"

What has become of the old-fashioned business man whose evenings were spent "on the books?"

Success is not a matter of the business a man's in, but the man that's in the business.

If living expenses get much higher half the world will quit wondering how the other half lives for it will be dead.

BOARDERS

For a large majority of small places the boarder is the most convenient form of ornamental planting and often the only practical one, consisting in utilizing a strip of ground along a walk. A border, generally speaking is a long and rather narrow planting. Originally denoting a planting that bordered something, such as the confines of the property, a walk, the side of a building or drive, the term has now come to be applied to a long narrow planting, even if it is made in the middle of the lawn.

The length is elastic, measured by the space at hand, but the width very often is arbitrary, the three or four feet between a walk and a fence or some similar limited space. For the most effective planting a border should be about six feet wide.

What is an annual border? It is a planting of annuals in adjoining groups arranged to give a definite color scheme or harmony or to give a continuous flash of color well distributed over the border. It is informal as compared with beds because the groupings of plants are irregular, the plan of planting in "drifts," long, narrow spaces, usually diagonally in the border, so that one group may mask another, being the most effective.

The tall plants are placed at the back and graded to the dwarfs at the front, with an occasional bringing of a tall group to the front to avoid the monotony of too great regularity. The easiest way to start an annual border is to trace the outlines of the groups with a pointed stick in the soil and scatter the seeds thinly in the spaces, thinning the plants as much as necessary when they germinate. The better plan is to sow in a seed bed and groups are intermingled at the edges.

The groups are selected as to size to suit the taste of the gardener, giving the most space to his favorite flowers. It is a difficult matter to make a planting that will not be pleasing, so far as color is concerned, so that not so much concern may be manifested over this feature in the annual border. One year's planting will suggest arrangements for the following year until the owner works out a scheme that pleases.

BUY IN BRISTOL!

A DOLLAR SPENT IN BRISTOL IS WORTH TWO SPENT ELSEWHERE BECAUSE IT IS REINVESTED BY LOCAL PEOPLE IN LOCAL ENTERPRISES AND HELPS TO PAY FOR LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS

Did you ever really give the subject of the local merchant and you any serious thought?

Perhaps you are a loyal citizen and patronize local shops and stores as a matter of loyalty, but as this is not a lecture it will do no harm to read this, anyhow.

Your local merchant is first a citizen, a resident of your community the same as you are.

He lives in your community, pays taxes along with you for the upkeep and improvement of your community; he raises his family and sends his children to school—schools which he helps, with you, to maintain.

If he is a butcher, he buys clothes and shoes for his family from a fellow-merchant. No matter what his line of business, he spends money with other business men of the community.

He banks in local banks; he takes his family of an evening to the local shows.

Summed up, the money he makes in the community is spent in it.

Were it not for your local merchant, there would be no schools, no paved streets, no public buildings, no progress nor prosperity. He is here day in and day out, rain or shine, giving his time and energy and money to whatever will benefit the district, taking part in the administrations of the community or aiding to regulate the administration for the best interests of the community by his vote.

HE IS A CITIZEN—

Is he not entitled, then, to consideration?

But there is something more than a call for your loyalty to him as citizen to citizen—neighbor to neighbor.

Living here as he does, he comes to know his customers. They are to him not "just customers," but "fellow citizens," "good neighbors." As he will be here tomorrow and the next day and next year, meeting his customers face to face, day after day, his business gets his personal attention—every transaction is a personal dealing between him and the patron.

He is your neighbor—your fellow citizen, building for tomorrow and next year, and fully cognizant that the only way to build is to sell good goods at right prices.

Your local merchant is in himself a guarantee of his goods and prices and services because he is always at the same stand meeting largely the same customers.

He cannot exist upon the patronage of transients—his livelihood comes from permanent residents; his aim is to make permanent residents regular customers. He must do this—hence his wares, his prices and his service are all and always arranged and held to this end.

You never heard your live-wire, wide-awake home merchant say, "Oh, well, one customer more or less makes no difference." Every customer, to him, is important; a new customer is eagerly sought, and a customer less—well, your local merchant will not let it happen if anything just and reasonable under the sun will prevent such a thing happening.

So not alone out of a sense of loyalty to your community, but for your own sake—for the sake of your purse and the satisfaction of being given personal attention and service—buy of our home merchants.

What Every Girl Should Know

By GISA PRUCHONE

Copyright, 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc. "WHAT EVERY GIRL SHOULD KNOW," with Patsy Ruth Miller, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Mary "Blaine" Sullivan—slender, beautiful, red-headed—is a tennis champion. A spiritual girl is Mary, despite her physical prowess. Her parents are dead. Wally Mason, a young reporter, loves Mary. But she disbelieves in love. Mary keeps house for her brothers, David and Bobby. David, the family support, hopes Mary will get safely married. David is sentenced to prison for an auto fatality. The Charity Department takes Bobby. Wally proposes; Mary goes to New York, and gets a cloakroom job in a notorious night club.

The leader of the band raised his violin in air, twirled it, caught it as it fell, nodded his head sharply with its rest, and the gleaming instruments took life. The lights were dimmed, casting shadowy shadows on the dance floor. One by one of the few guests of THE WHITE APE threaded their way about the tables with the floor as their objective. There the women took on such softness of femininity, such charm of submission that Mary's eyes swam with the loveliness of it, the by-gone courtliness of it and the old-fashioned charm. Stalwart masculinity bending over the frailness of the feminine forms.

"So beautiful," Mary thought it, and wondered wherein the harm lay in the much-maligned night club?

"Roses are blooming in Picardy, In the hush of the silvery moon."

The same old song that Mary knew, played differently somehow. Played to a certain ill, a certain hiccup, that made the beat uneven and unconsciously raised your shoulders. Oh, the swing of

"What's the matter, kitten, don't you like the show?"

It, the gayly swaying rhythm of it! In her thoughts she, too, danced on that waxed floor. With—Wally. Quite naturally he slipped into her arms, and away they went to the intoxication of the hiccoughing saxophone. Wally—I've made this already, Wally, and the night not half begun. My first money earned, Wally, see? Need I depend upon you, or David anymore when I can do this with my smile and the swing of my hair?

"Miss," a perfumed wrap thrust at her. A wrap heavy with the languor of the body it had the moment before embraced. After that there was no time to dance with Wally on the golden floor. Wraps and hats and gloves thrust into capacious pockets and checks, checks, checks. It was a little bewildering at first, and there was the added anxiety of her nerves. Her fingers were thumbs, and there were so many of them. Then the discomfort, that internal twitching that comes with the concentration of an alien gaze, and Mary looked up to find Bessie facing her, which didn't help matters any. Would he think her inefficient? Oh, surely not. There! There was that coat neatly hung. "Your check, sir!"

It had grown unbearably close. The air had slowly grown foggy with smoke, and breathing was difficult. Strangely enough, the noise had also increased. Mary had been too busy with the rush of new comers to take notice of what was going on about her. The stillness of electric fans could be heard between snatches of music, making long graceful curves in an effort to clear the air. The dance floor was a writhing mass. Shoulders tilted to the rasp of the saxophone, but feet remained in place. Nobody really danced. You stood in place, length of body against body, and made motions with your head and your shoulders and hips. There was a sudden commotion in a far corner and Bessie appeared, running out a befogged youth whose red eyes and lolling head brought a rush of aversion to Mary, quickly followed by pity. Four of his companions followed, more or less under the sway of liquor. Nobody paid any attention to them.

The bored look of an accidental party to the little scene was quickly shifted. A party of three men and two women took the places of the boys. These were drunk before they entered. The still writhing mass on the dance floor, twitching to the "come hither" of the band. A sudden shriek from an hysterical woman. "You let her alone, blast you!"

Oh, Oh. This was vulgar. This was low. The catlike Bessie at her elbow.

"What's the matter, kitten, don't you like the show?" She wished he wouldn't come so close. She could see the part in his ridged hair, and the little oily drops on the coarse blackness of it.

"That's life, kitten. That's New York. Where do you come from, h'm, kitten? Tell Bessie."

There was such an air of the serpent about to leap, gleaming from Bessie's heavy-lidded eyes, that Mary could not force the words Garden City from her mouth. He would think her untarnished lily-white innocence rampant. She managed, "Chicago," and had to repeat it close to his scintillatingly bent ear to make herself heard.

"Chicago, eh? Not so hot. Can't compare it with little old New York, eh Miss Sullivan?" Mentally Bessie was rubbing palm against palm in self-satisfaction at this city of New York, in pride of possession. He leaned an elbow on the little shelf of her cage, and jerked his head toward the dancers.

"Heh—dirty!" It is difficult to describe Bessie's "heh—dirty!" It's simply one of those things that must be heard. In time to the rhythm of the music he jerked his head and twitched one shoulder, and Mary knew, though she could not see it, that his feet, those thin paper-like feet, were drawing queer figures on the floor. Bessie was not wedged in among the mass on the floor, but nevertheless, Bessie was dancing. At one-thirty Bessie, the artist, was called upon for his specialty.

Shouts greeted him, and whistles, and the clink of coin on the smoothness of the dance-floor. "Hi—Benny!" "Yay!" "H-hot! Boy!" "That-a-kid, Big Boy! Strut it!" One languorous weaving of his thin black legs about one another, out and about again, brought forth more cries, and hand-clapping, and further cries of "Do that thing!" He lifted his pink face from observation of those miraculous rippling feet, to be greeted by a storm of hand-claps. It was evidently a favorite step. Women were standing on the tables, supported by the arms of their men clasped about their legs. One girl slipped, and fell and was kissed all in a breath.

With Bessie's specialty at an end, the floor was once more taken possession of by the horde of dancers, and Mary turned to find Babs at her elbow. A transformed little elf, her brown body gleaming where the trappings of an Indian princess failed to hide it, and of trappings there were not much.

"I do a jazz on Pocahontas," she explained. Then, "Listen, will you, to that!" There were calls of "Bessie! We want Bessie!" from a group of men at a table near the dance-floor. Their heads were together, the light reflected on the pinkness of their scalps. Wine glasses were being thumped on the table in rhythm. "We want Bessie!" They were the source of much amusement to the dancers wedged in beside the table. One of them tapped a bald pate smartly with the toe of her slipper, and the hilarity resulting from this was loud and general.

There was pride in the snapping explosives that were the eyes of little Babs. Strangely softened eyes, with lids that were suddenly heavy. "The boy friend," she told Mary. "Bessie. Yeh—the boy friend. Don't you think him the greatest little stepper that ever slid on a floor? We're going to do a headliner for vaudeville one of these days. Bessie and me." The slur over "Bessie and me."

Suddenly Mary knew not what to say, but she longed to touch Babs, and did, taking and holding her little brown paw. This, she knew, was love, and felt herself unworthy. Unworthy of what? She did not know. But Babs had grown. No longer the little brown Babs with the body of an elf, but a woman, and taking Bessie with her to the heights. So powerfully did it emanate from her. So powerfully that it lifted Bessie, with his hair that reeked of oil and his slow repulsive suavity of tone, and the feet in the paper thin patent leather oxfords.

"You're a good kid." Thus Babs, suddenly, as she gripped Mary's hand where it held hers. Then she was gone, running on tiptoes toward the dance-floor, waiting toward it, rather, where the music was heralding her coming. A naughty pique with snapping eyes and a heart that was heavy with love for Bessie. Bessie who called Mary "Kittens" and relished the morsel of word, rolling about on his tongue.

Observations About Events, Persons and Things Which Are of General Interest. : : :

Pennsylvania is to be congratulated on the advancement she has made in road-building and erection of bridges across the numerous streams that wind their way through her fair valleys.

Where improvement is to be made her strides have been rapid, and thousands of motorists are benefitted by improved road surfaces.

On the 28th and 29th of this month there is to be opened in the State Department of Highways bids for 31 miles of highways and two bridges. In all 17 new projects are scheduled for these two days, and all but three will be of concrete construction. One of these bridges will be in Huntingdon county and the second will be erected in Indiana county.

Not only are new road-beds being laid, but on many miles of improved roads oiling crews may be seen at work each week. Money is constantly being spent by the department of highways to maintain the thoroughfares, for the benefit of the motoring public.

On July 15th a contract was awarded for the construction of 317 feet of roadway in Falls Township, not many miles from here. The state appropriated a portion of the cost for the construction of the new highway through Bristol several months ago.

Then, considering the erection of bridges which span many rivers and creeks within Pennsylvania, or between this state and adjoining states, the results are gratifying.

At a cost of $280,000 a bridge spanning the Delaware between Centre Bridge, Pa., and Stockton, N. J., was marked a "short cut" to New York City, opened on July 15th. The opening for those who own automobiles, its construction will save many miles of traveling and much time to the public in general. Pennsylvania's appropriation toward the cost of the new structure was $100,000.

Bristol borough council as well as organizations here have gone on record as approving the Burlington-Bristol bridge project. It is hoped that before long this dream will be a reality.

It is interesting indeed to watch the reports that come in from all sections of the state, reports which really give the history of Pennsylvania's progress in road and bridge building.

Dempsey Knocks Sharkey Cold As Frappe In 7th

low enough to deserve inquiry. It landed at or under the belt; not over it, in any case. But the writer is not particularly concerned with the punch in question. You can't foul a man with a punch on the jaw, and it was such a punch that finished Sharkey.

Further, there was no claim of foul in Sharkey's corner and the referee calmly went on with the tuneless men, apparently serene in the belief that everything was as it should have been.

Anyhow, post mortems of that kind never won a prize fight. Hit them over the fence and, if the umpire says fair, it is so ordered even if you gather about until daylight and weep until your vests are sodden.

No, this fight is dead; long live the next one. And live long, it will.

Dempsey and Tunney are set now to repeat their rampage of the rain, only this time they will play Chicago just by way of diversion, and for good measure.

No ballyhoo, no smoke up is needed. Dempsey is the greatest man before the public today. He is the darling of the galleries again, a man whom they trusted and whom they trusted not in vain.

Not many champions shorn of their titles have come back to such an impressive gesture as Dempsey made last night. Willard did it against Floyd Johnson and then folded up against Louie Firpo. This may or may not be prophetic but I don't mind saying that I shudder to think what Tunney will do to the gasping, spavined Dempsey of the first six rounds last night.

But, then, I picked Sharkey to win in ten rounds, so it is probable that no one cares particularly how much or how violently I may shudder in the future.

However, as I saw it, Dempsey kept charging in with the old aggressiveness and played to the body as viciously as of yore. Except for his painful lack of speed and stamina, he fought a typical Dempsey fight. It merely was unfortunate that Sharkey didn't get around to doing the same for himself.

It is interesting to hear the lads refer to their director and his assistants in tones of admiration. The director this year is George W. Casey, with William G. Frantz as associate director. For every two tents there is a junior counselor who is responsible for his section.

Several small buildings have been erected, one of which the director uses as his headquarters.

The welfare of the inner boy is attended to likewise, many good books being provided in a large library building. Here the boys may be seen at small desks writing to their home-folks of the glorious days at camp. The frame buildings are all fitted for electricity and running water. At the rear of the library are two rooms used as a dispensary. The boys are weighed there, and a doctor is always in attendance. All that goes to make up a first-class first-aid station has been provided, even to a cot and a well stocked medicine closet.

One hundred boys, between 11 and 17, are in camp each week, some coming for two-week periods. Each morning at 7 o'clock they arise, and the 100 with a grand rush make "rollies" as they take their "buck" bath. By 7:30 they must be ready for breakfast.

and then feeling topper prepare for a day of activity.

They proudly point to two war canoes, each 35 feet long. These accommodate 22 passengers each, and it is a splendid sight to see the 22 paddles working in unison. Five other canoes as well as eight row-boats are tied to the wharf. The boys who are not at home in the water are taught to swim, row and paddle. All water sports are well supervised.

Dotting the camp grounds are: basketball and paddle tennis courts, baseball diamond, volley ball court. Then, too, fishing poles are much in evidence.

Just at present seven teams which form a baseball league in the camp, are vying for honors.

Activities do not cease with dusk, for a wood just at the rear of the buildings affords a splendid spot for an escaped convict hunt or treasure hunt at night.

The men responsible for this splendid piece of work have provided two large trucks which each week bring into camp new "recruits," and return others to their homes. The site is two miles from the main highway, and at this spot away from traffic these boys from the heart of the city are taught to build up strong bodies, live clean, and look to the proper growth of their minds.

A BUSINESS AND A LIVING ON ONE ACRE!

PIGEON FRUIT RABBIT GRAPE ALFALFA VEGETABLE POULTRY
PENS TREES HUTCHES VINEYARDS PATCH GARDENS HOUSES

Here's one acre at Van Nuys, Cal., that produces fruits, vegetables and accommodates chickens, pigeons and rabbits in sufficient quantity to provide a living and an income. It's the "most cultivated acre in the world."

International Illustrated News.

Utopians' Dream Comes True, but Capital Is Catch In Complete One-Acre Farm

VAN NUYS, Cal. (I-I-N Special).—An acre of ground and a living! This old dream of Utopians and singletaxers has become a reality—experimentally—here in Van Nuys.

A plot of ground 200 to 218 feet provides a business for one family and in return offers a generous living.

On this single acre may be found:

Hutches accommodating 500 rabbits.

Pens accommodating 1,670 pigeons.

Runs accommodating 1,000 chickens.

A mature cherry orchard.

Plus trees.

Nectarine trees.

Loquat trees.

Fig trees.

Apple trees.

Seven varieties of grapes.

A blackberry patch.

A strawberry patch.

A raspberry patch.

An alfalfa patch.

A vegetable garden producing kale, Swiss chard and lettuce.

Most of the enterprises are capable of paying a profit as well as supplying the family's wants. Flowers and shrubbery adorn the acre. Electricity lights all buildings and water is piped to all parts of the acre.

There's just one catch for those who may throw up their white-collar jobs and seek to duplicate this farm.

It cost a commercial organization $20,000 to bring about "the world's most intensively cultivated acre."
